The Bio-Well Observation

Every living thing gives off faint light. Researcher Cécile Garin used Bio-Well, a non-medical imaging system, to record it before and after wearing the Quantum Energy Card™.

> Prepared by Quantum Lifestyle in November 2026 from the observation Cécile Garin recorded in 2024.

At a glance

Recorded by	Cécile Garin, certified expert in bio-electro-photonics, in 2024
Instrument	Bio-Well, a non-medical imaging system, following the Bio-Well protocol
Participant	One 57-year-old man
Product	Quantum Energy Card™, worn on the skin
Measured	Energy Reserve, and left, front and right energy, as calculated by the Bio-Well software

Cécile Garin brings an international, scientific perspective to the study of wellness. After a degree in consular sciences and international trade in Brussels, she spent six years in the pharmaceutical industry, managing marketing for cosmetic and health-related products. In 2010 she turned to naturopathy, dietetics and functional micronutrition, and she later became a certified expert in bio-electro-photonics through Atlantic University in Madrid.

As a research and educational contributor to Quantum Lifestyle, she recorded the Bio-Well observations of the Quantum Energy Card™ and presents them in educational webinars, always as non-medical, non-diagnostic work.

What is biophotony?

All living things give off very small amounts of light, called biophotons, as a by-product of normal biochemical processes. Biophotony is the study of how, when and where this light appears.

To observe and document it, researchers use specialized, non-medical imaging technologies. One of them is Bio-Well.

What is Bio-Well?

Bio-Well is a non-medical imaging system based on gas discharge visualization (GDV) and electrophotonic imaging technology. It is designed to observe and record patterns of light emission associated with the human biofield.

The Bio-Well system is used internationally for research, educational and wellness-related observations.

How Bio-Well works

Bio-Well is based on gas discharge visualization (GDV), a modern form of the Kirlian effect. It records the faint light around each fingertip and turns it into a picture.

It gives precious information to an educated practitioner about the health of the organs or systems of organs. It does not treat, not at all. But in some situations it can prevent, with what we see on the pictures, and it can be the first step of a diagnosis, or at least show a starting problem on an organ. This is case by case.

A fingertip on the lens

One finger at a time rests on a glass lens.

A brief pulse

A short electrical pulse makes the light around the fingertip visible.

One picture

Software combines all ten readings into one image of the whole body.

More than a century in the making

1891	Nikola Tesla	Shows photographs of glowing discharges in a lecture on high-frequency currents.
1939	Semyon Kirlian	Discovers the Kirlian effect: the glow around a living thing, caught on film.
Today	Bio-Well	Gas discharge visualization (GDV) brings the effect into a non-medical digital camera.

One person, four readings

Cécile recorded one man's Energy Reserve at four points: in a normal week, after six hard weeks away, after 48 hours wearing the Quantum Energy Card™ on his skin, and 24 hours after taking it off.

Energy Reserve, as calculated by the Bio-Well software

In a normal week	100%
After six hard weeks away	67%
After 48 hours wearing the card on his skin	81%
24 hours after taking the card off	74%

Left, front and right energy (Joules × 10^{-2})

Reading	After six hard weeks	48 hours with the card	24 hours after removing it
Left	26.35	30.77	30.15
Front	46.06	50.23	49.14
Right	25.57	32.31	32.12

About this observation

What was recorded

- One person, recorded in 2024
- Taken with Bio-Well, following its protocol
- Readings before and after wearing the card
- Recorded for the Quantum Energy Card™ only

How to read it

- Case by case: each person's readings differ
- Best read by an educated practitioner
- Individual observations vary
- Alongside, not instead of, medical advice
