1,298 free tools — PDF, image, video, audio, OCR, speech-to-text, developer, calculators, converters, generators and more — that run inside the browser. The file never leaves the user's device: there is no server, no upload, no account, no usage caps and no watermarks.

Inside: how it works and how to verify it (p. 2) · the 14 categories with examples (pp. 3–4) · what organisations can license, and what is on the roadmap (p. 5).

HOW IT WORKS

The work happens on the user's device.

Every tool is a web page. The engines that do the work — ffmpeg for video and audio, Tesseract for OCR, a Whisper model for speech-to-text, pdf-lib for PDFs — run inside the browser through WebAssembly. There is no upload step because there is nothing to upload to.

STEP 1Open a tool

Type what you need in the search box, or pick a category. No sign-up, no install. Works on any phone or laptop.

STEP 2Drop the file

The file stays in the browser tab. It is never sent anywhere — there is no server, no API and no database behind the site.

STEP 3Download the result

The converted, compressed or edited file is made on your device and saved straight to it. Close the tab and nothing remains.

Verify it yourself, in five seconds

Open the browser's DevTools, choose Network, then run any tool. You will see the page's own scripts load — and no request carrying your file. Then switch Wi-Fi off and run the tool again: most tools keep working, because everything they need is already on the device.

Free today, on every tool

- No account and no sign-up
- No usage caps and no queue
- No watermarks
- No ads today
- Installable as an app; works offline once loaded
- Dark mode; built mobile-first

Built for India first

- NEET, SSC and UPSC photo and signature presets
- "Compress PDF to 200 KB" for government portals
- Aadhaar masking
- GST and SIP calculators
- Commands typed in Hinglish — "photo ko 200 kb karo"

Honest limits

- Two developer tools — the webhook tester and the API request builder — send requests to a URL the user types, because that is what they are for.
- Large video re-encodes are slower than a server and bounded by the device's memory.
- Each file is capped at 100 MB.

Not a PDF site with extras.

Counts are live tool pages on www.anytool.tech as of 24 September 2026. Preset pages (a tool with locked settings, such as "NEET photo resize") are counted as tools.

SERVICES

Free for individuals. Licensed to organisations.

The free tools bring the users. The paid lines below are how the same engine becomes a business — each one already has a competitor charging for it. Only the first line exists today; the rest are on the roadmap and their timing depends on funding.

Line	For whom	What it is	Pricing model	Status
Free tools	Everyone	All 1,298 tools at www.anytool.tech , no account, no caps, no watermarks.	Free; ads to come, with sensitive categories blocked	Live
Premium	Individuals	Batch processing, bigger files and priority features — things the free tier never promised.	A few hundred rupees a month	Planned
Business	Teams	Shared workspace, admin controls, the team's own branding.	Per seat	Planned
Enterprise licence	Banks, clinics, law firms, government	The AnyTool engine running on the customer's own servers or intranet: nothing ever leaves their building.	Lakhs of rupees a year per customer	Planned — first pilot sought
API and SDK	Developers	Embed AnyTool's tools inside their own apps and sites.	Monthly	Planned
Apps	Desktop and mobile users	The same engine packaged as a fully offline app.	One-time price	Planned

Why the margin is unusual

Every rival pays for servers to process each user's file. AnyTool's processing runs on the user's device, so there is no compute cost per user and hosting is about $0 at any scale. A paying customer is close to pure margin.

Who the enterprise licence is for

Any organisation that must not upload customer files: a bank compressing KYC documents, a clinic handling scans, a law firm redacting contracts, a government office resizing applicant photos. With AnyTool there is no personal data to protect on our side, because we never receive it.
